

STRANGERS TO LOVERS

I could've stayed in, gone left instead of right Or done a thousands things, instead of meeting you that night

You could've called a friend, you could've called it quits
You could've walked home, before midnight hit But you didn't

It happened in a minute and you almost passed me by I was holding the door when you threw me a smile
Life's twists and turns left us where we began
We went from strangers to lovers and back to strangers again

It can all change, so damn fast
Our future plans, became the past

What I miss the most,
it don't sound like much But it's calling your number and you picking up

Well it only took an hour of an ordinary night
For you to steal my heart without even trying Life's twists and turns left us where we began
We went from strangers to lovers and now we're strangers again

It took about a year to know it wasn't right I didn't want to change, you didn't want to fight
Life's twists and turns left us where we began
We went from strangers to lovers and back to strangers again
From strangers to lovers and now we're strangers again
